

A HISTORY OF THE VILLAGE WALBERSWICK TAKEN FROM WHITE'S TRADE DIRECTORY 1891

Walberswick is an ancient village near the sea, on the south side of the river Blythe, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.W. of Southwold, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. of Dunwich, with a station on the Southwold and Halesworth Railway. The parish is in Blything union, Halesworth county court district, Yarmouth bankruptcy court district, Blything hundred and petty sessional division, Dunwich rural deanery, Suffolk archdeanery, and Norwich diocese.

It had 289 inhabitants in 1881 and comprises 1,900 acres of land: the rateable value is £ 1,621. It is a place of great antiquity, and was once a considerable town, which carried on an extensive commerce both by land and sea, especially in fish, having, in 1451, 13 barques trading to Iceland, Ferro, and the North Seas, and 22 fishing boats employed off this coast. The alteration of the port, which ruined the town of Dunwich, proved a source of increased prosperity to Walberswick, which continued to thrive till the middle of the 16th century, when the alteration made in the established religion [region?] proved highly detrimental to this, as well as to many other towns on the coast, whose principal support was derived from the fishery. From that time Walberswick began gradually to decline, and frequent and destructive conflagrations hastened its ruin. Before 1583 it had suffered severely by fire; in 1633 a great part was burned; in 1683 it was again visited by a similar scourge; and in 1749 about one-third of the small remains of the town was consumed. There is now a quay for vessels of 100 tons. Sir Ralph M. Blois, Bart., is lord of the manor, which is mostly freehold. The Church (St. Andrew) was rebuilt by the parishioners, who commenced the new fabric in 1473, and finished it in 1493. It was a large and handsome structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, aisles, south porch with high pitched roof, and contained a chapel of Our Lady, and images of the Holy Trinity, the Rood, and St. Andrew and other saints. Though it suffered considerably from the Puritanical visitors of the 17th century, it continued nearly entire till 1696, when the inhabitants, unable to support the charge of repairs, took down the greater part of it, reserving only the south-west angle for divine service, but the tower and some of the outer walls of the chancel are still standing. Several of the windows have been recently restored and repaired. When entire, the church was 124 feet long, and 60 feet broad. The tower, which is 90 feet high, was partly blown down in 1839, and was repaired in the following year; but is now in a dilapidated state, and an effort is being made to restore it. The organ was formerly in Lowestoft Church. The Register dates from 1656. The benefice is a vicarage, valued at £ 51, in the incumbency of the Rev. Thos. Hy. Royal Oakes, together with that of Blythburg. Sir R.M. Blois is patron, and also impropiator of the tithes, which were commuted in 1840, for a yearly rent-charge of £ 193. The late Sir Charles Blois gave the present parsonage house.

The National School is attended by about 60 children.

The Reading Room was established here in 1889. It is supplied with daily and weekly newspapers and has a small library of about 200 vol., and about 50 members. Mr. John Benham is secretary.

There is a small Congregational Chapel and a Primitive Methodist Chapel erected in 1846. Lampland Marsh, let for £ 2 per annum, has been held from time immemorial for the repairs of the church.

Upon 34 acres of enclosed marsh, every housholder has a right to turn one head of cattle.

On 40 acres of salt marsh, all parishioners have a right to turn what stock they choose.

A heath of $84\frac{1}{2}$ acres is an open pasture for all resident parishioners, who have also the liberty of cutting furze, turf, ling, &c.

The marshes and heath are let for grazing at about £ 230 a year, and the proceeds, after paying certain charges, are distributed amongst the parishioners. An agent of the Charity Commissioners was here in 1887, making enquiries for the purposes of a new scheme, but nothing of the the kind has yet been introduced. The tenant of Westwood Lodge (see Blythburgh) has also the right of turning sheep upon this heath, adjoining which is $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres of open marsh, stocked in the same manner. This marsh might be enclosed and improved at a small expense.
